Dear Dorothy,

Thank you for your letter, even though you told me off for writing short letters. You have a heck of a nerve, you know. Still its New Year so let us start right and bury the hatchet.

I dont want to make you too jealous by telling you about Christmas Day in the workhouse R.A.F. so I will just say I had a better time here than I have ever had at home. You can guess the sordid details. New Year was quieter but still very enjoyable. I only hope something exciting turned up to make your

My Dear Dorothy,

Many thanks for breaking the past operational silence. Although I have not been writing. I have often thought of your plight in the buzz-bomb attacks, and I have made a lot of enquiries from chaps coming back from leave in your neck of the woods. I know you have had your share of it but I knew you would get away with it on charm when we poor mortals have to rely on guns. Yes, for quite a while now I have been doing more than wearing a soldier's hat. It was very gratifying to plaster the launching sites on you.
